September has arrived, which means we are officially ready for all things fall... even if our Louisiana weather hasn't quite gotten the memo.

Before we trade swimsuits for football Saturdays and (eventually) cooler temperatures, we still have one last long summer weekend to enjoy. Labor Day weekend is the perfect excuse to spend a little extra time at the Club, and we hope you'll make plans to spend it with us. Grab the family, and soak up the last unofficial weekend of summer.

As we head into one of our busiest and most enjoyable seasons, don't forget that some of our very best new members come from referrals from those who already know and love Beau Chêne Country Club. If you have friends, neighbors or family members who you think would enjoy being part of our Club community, I would love the opportunity to show them around and introduce them to everything Beau Chêne has to offer.

Let's welcome some of our newest members!

JARED & ASHLEY AVERILL

(6)—entertained whenever their busy extracurricular schedules allow. As a family, they enjoy spending time with friends, golfing, and staying active to help balance their love of wine and relaxing at home with their Berne doodle puppy, Buddy.

Jared and Ashley moved to Madisonville in 2015 after Jared convinced Ashley there was no better place to raise a family. Jared grew up in Mandeville and is a graduate of St. Paul's School and LSU, while Ashley is originally from Houma and is also an LSU graduate. The couple met while working at their first insurance job after college. Jared is Vice President of Sales at Accretive, a benefits enrollment firm, and Ashley is a Personal Lines Insurance Producer at Hartwig Moss Insurance. They joined Beau Chêne to help keep their three daughters—Hayden (11), Isla (7), and Joplin golf and already has his sights set on one day playing on the PGA Tour. Reece, who is six, is a Leadership Ambassador at Madisonville Elementary and loves swimming. He is especially excited to spend time at the pool and make new friends at Beau Chêne. The Bergeron family looks forward to enjoying everything the Club has to offer and creating lasting memories with their fellow members.

Brett and his family are excited to become part of the Beau Chêne Country Club community. Brett is a Senior Auditor with the Louisiana Home Builders Association Workers Compensation Fund. A lifelong golfer, he played collegiate golf at Southeastern Louisiana University before competing professionally for five years, earning more than 20 victories on various mini tours. Baker, who is eight, shares his dad's passion for

GOLF COURSE NEWS

Toby Thornton, Director of Agronomy

September always brings a welcome sense of transition at Beau Chêne. While the Gulf South may not feel much like fall just yet, shorter days and slightly cooler mornings signal a change in season and a shift in how we care for the golf courses.

After a long, hot summer, our agronomy team remains focused on maintaining healthy turf and preparing both courses for the months ahead. September brings continued mowing, fertility and weed management, along with attention to high-traffic and stressed areas. As temperatures begin to moderate, we will also take advantage of favorable conditions to address areas that need a little extra attention following the summer heat.

We also appreciate everyone's patience and cooperation as our team works throughout the property. Please continue to observe cart restrictions, ropes, signs, and marked areas. These small efforts make a tremendous difference in protecting the turf and allowing our crew to work safely and efficiently.

As we move into one of the best times of year for golf, I want to thank our agronomy team for their hard work through another demanding Louisiana summer. Their dedication shows every day across both courses.

Thank you, as always, to our members for your continued support and patience. We look forward to a great September and an enjoyable fall season at Beau Chêne.

See you on the course,
Toby Thornton

NAVIGATING MIDLIFE

Starting at age 40, our body starts to change; metabolism slows down, hormonal changes take a toll. We are also forced with responsibilities from career, children and aging parents. Through all of that, sometimes health is overlooked. However; genetics, lifestyle habits, physical activity, nutrition and overall health all influence how our body changes over time.

Changes in Muscle Mass: One of the primary physiological changes associated with aging is the gradual decline in muscle mass. Research has shown that strength training can help slow these losses, making resistance exercise one of the most important interventions available. Balance, mobility, flexibility and strength become extremely important. Try to get in 2-3 strength training sessions per week, adding balance, mobility and stretching into your routine.

Cardiovascular and Metabolic Changes: Our maximum heart rate tends to decline with age. Blood vessel elasticity can change and risk factors for cardiovascular disease often increase. It is recommended to get 150 minutes of moderate aerobic activity with a target heart rate of 50% to 85% of your maximum. To determine your maximum heart rate, subtract your age from 220.

Hormonal Transition: Throughout menopause (peri and post), women will experience a flood of issues, from hot flashes, sleep quality, changes in body composition, and fluctuating energy levels to name a few. I highly recommend going to a hormone specialist to check your hormone levels. (Many OBGYN's do not specialize in hormones). Hormone replacement therapy has helped many women.

Men also experience a gradual decline in testosterone levels. Strength training directly counters this decline. However, if you find your energy level has decreased, you experience low sex drive and have sleep issues, a hormone specialist may also be helpful.

Nutrition: Nutrition influences energy levels, exercise recovery, muscles maintenance, immune function and long-term health outcomes. The quality of food choices becomes critical. Focus on a whole-food, a plant-predominant diet high in fiber-rich foods while minimizing processed foods and eliminating refined sugar. Adding adequate protein consumption supports muscles and helps preserve lean muscle mass during aging. Hydration is also very important, as it influences energy, cognitive performance and exercise capacity.

Recovery and Restorative Sleep: Sleep is when your body repairs cells, clears out toxic waste, and balances hormones. Some tips on a better night's sleep: keep the bedroom cool (60 to 67 degrees), turn off all lights, use a sound machine or ear plugs, invest in a supportive mattress and avoid caffeine 8-10 hours before bedtime. Try to get seven to nine hours of uninterrupted rest each night.

Socialization: Researchers recognize the importance of social connection to overall health and wellness. Individuals who maintain meaningful relationships often demonstrate better emotional well-

SPORTS TIP

*by Matt Peale,
Director of Personal Training*

The Importance of Youth Fitness

Organized sports are a valuable way for children and teens to stay active, build teamwork, and develop confidence. Long-term health into adulthood also depends on building safe, consistent fitness habits. Research has shown that physical activity is linked to academic performance in children and adolescents (Dyer et al., 2017). It is encouraging to see more youth using the fitness center, and the Youth Fitness Certification helps ensure they learn how to train safely and responsibly.

Research also shows that youth sports participation can support lifelong activity. In one long-term study, individuals who participated in sports between ages 9 and 18 were five to six times more likely to remain active into adulthood (Telama et al., 2006). At the same time, the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA, n.d.) reports that only 7% of the 7 million high school athletes progress to collegiate athletics, and only 2% of that group become professional athletes. For most children, the lasting benefit of youth fitness is not athletic advancement, but the development of healthy habits that can continue well beyond high school and into adulthood.

At Beau Chêne Tennis & Fitness we can assist you in navigating midlife. From strength training, group exercise classes, tennis and socialization, we are here to help!
